

THE CHRONICLE.

VETO NO. 2.

Mr. Hayes has vetoed the bill for the presence of the army at the polls, presented, as it was, separate from the appropriation bill, as vetoed it before when united with that bill. There is no doubt that he will also veto the two other measures for the consideration of which the present extra session was called, namely the bill for withdrawing from Election Supervisors and Federal Marshals their present powers of arbitrary arrest and that for abolishing the test oath for Federal Jurors. What Congress will do we are unable to say; the rumor at present is that they will pass the appropriations up to January adjourn. As far as we can see they might as well pass them for the usual period. Having abandoned the power of withholding appropriations, having virtually assented to the position of the Republicans that the assertion of that power is revolutionary, the making any stand upon appropriations is an empty menace and worse than useless.

The appeal is now to the people at the election of 1880, and will be made under the formidable disadvantage that almost incalculable powers remain in the hands of the Executive for setting aside the people's verdict, while the complete surrender of the Republican party to its most unscrupulous element which has recently taken place is a sufficient indication that those powers will be put forth to their utmost extent.

Let us not be misunderstood; we are satisfied that the Democratic party as at present constituted could have taken no other position than it did. There was a bolder and more efficient course before it, involving, we admit, very heavy responsibilities, but this course required the complete unanimity in conviction of the whole party or such a preponderance in Congress as to preclude vacillation in the party in carrying out the policy. These two advantages were neither of them in the hands of the Democracy, and they are reduced therefore to their present expectant position. We only say that, as these things were known from the first, it was in our view an error to have ever associated the repealing clauses with the appropriation bills. This should never be done except with the fixed resolution of maintaining them inseparable to the end; for it is a condition of weakness to recede from such a policy damaging in the highest degree to any party which pursues such a course.

We have now a controversy before the people in which ours is undoubtedly the position best adapted for popular discussion, but we come to it with a colossal weight of executive prerogative against us.

THE COLORED CONVENTION AT NASHVILLE.

Having spent a few days at Nashville last week, we made some inquiries as to the convention or conference of colored people then going on in the capital. We did not seek admission to their deliberations, nor are we sure that it would have been accorded us had we sought it, for it was rather exclusively conducted, but any way we were well contented to rely for our information upon our valued contemporary the Nashville American, which published very fully reports of the proceedings, with sensible and dispassionate remarks upon them. What we saw with our own eyes was a large number of delegates scattered about through the corridors of the Capitol, and along the walks of its beautiful grounds. These did not certainly look as if they came from an impoverished and bulldozed South; they were sleek and well clothed, and altogether moved about with the self-importance of men who owned a considerable section of this universe. The Northern negroes might be recognized by observing a peculiarly patronizing—we had almost said a disdainful—air in their intercourse with their Southern brethren. The meeting at Nashville, taking what we can learn of it from the American for our criterion, was almost exclusively a politicians' meeting, got up for political purposes, and the great staple of the discussion was a diluted solution of the declaration on Southern subjects heard from Blaine and Robeson, Logan, Edmunds and Chandler in Congress. Admissions to it were given for tickets and a careful selection made of the persons who might be in accord with the purposes of its existence. Mr. Pinchback, formerly Senator from Louisiana, was its Chairman, and gave the members sound advice in one respect, telling them not to leave any place in the South where they were not intolerably abused, and even intimated to them that they might go a long way without finding the 'possum fat and honey' that their souls desire without working for it and working hard, too. The truth is that Pinchback is a true friend to his race (he is of African descent) than the mass of white politicians who desire to make use of them. But very little of the proceedings were in that spirit, and the last thing that is to be expected as a result of the meeting is a dispassionate consideration of what is best for the colored man.

Presentation.
The following letter, addressed by an attached congregation to the Rev. J. W. Lupton, Presbyterian minister of this place, was read by us with much interest, and we in turn as a thing creditable to both people and minister.

We have seen the beautiful present with which it was accompanied, a handsome double-sided gold watch. On the outside Mr. Lupton's monogram, tastefully designed and elegantly engraved, and on the inner cover an inscription expressing the same sentiment as the subjoined letter. Mr. Lupton has received so many tokens of kindness from his congregation that he has been obliged to publish on his own account, he thought it no longer fitting to withhold a public acknowledgment; hence the permission to publish the letter with an account of the transaction.

CLARKSVILLE, May 10, 1879.

Rev. J. W. Lupton:—Desiring to show our love for our dear pastor and our appreciation of his earnest efforts in our behalf, we beg his acceptance of the accompanying watch as a slight testimonial of the same, which he has so long and faithfully labored for the welfare and happiness of his own, and kind more strongly than ever with it. With kindest regards and prayers of MANY FRIENDS.

Personal Mention.

John L. Duff and family have returned to Erin.
Dr. Baird left for Nashville on Tuesday morning.
Rev. J. H. Reynolds of Erin, was in the city the first of this week.
E. T. Hogan and lady of Stewart county, was in the city on Tuesday last.
Dick Broadus is in New York buying a new stock of goods for the summer trade.
Dr. Earle's health is still improving. He has been down to his office two or three days this week.
G. C. Reed, of Louisville, accompanied by his wife and daughter, paid our city a visit this week.

Rev. A. G. Dinwiddie, of Cedar Hill, was in the city the first of the week visiting relatives and friends.
Mr. Geo. McCarty, of Columbia, Tenn., was circulating among his friends here on Monday and Tuesday.
We had a pleasant call from Dr. Edwards, of Erin, on Tuesday last. Also a call from Mr. Nichols of Houston county.

Dr. W. A. West of Indian Mound, Stewart county, was in the city to witness the coroner's coronation last Tuesday.

The irrepressible John Gaines, of the Herald-Enterprise, published at Russellville, Ky., was in attendance on the Coroner's coronation last Tuesday.

Mr. D. B. Galley, of Nashville, who organized the Knights of Honor in our city some three years ago, has been here several days this week in the interest of the order.

Capt. Henry Herndon, with his mounted Kentuckians made an imposing appearance as they entered the Public Square on Tuesday last, and were heartily cheered by the Tennesseans.

Mr. J. Harris, junior partner of the firm of C. Shubinski & Co. is east selecting a stock of goods for the summer trade, and the ladies are expected to see something of him when their goods roll in.

We are indebted to Mr. J. W. Hiett for the first strawberries of the season. They were large, ripe and well flavored. We have rather a weakness for strawberries. We are also indebted to the same gentleman for some fine pie plantain, the largest we have ever seen.

We clip the following from the South Kentuckian, of the 12th, published at Knoxville, and commit them to the tender of our readers.

Our young friend, C. M. Metcalfe, of the firm of Metcalfe & Sons, has gone to Clarksville to establish a large and elegant furniture house in this city. (Clarkie is a clever, industrious and energetic fellow, an upright and straightforward business man, and we wish him much success in his new venture.)

Catholice Entertainment.

The catholice entertainment at Stewart Cabinet Hall Thursday night was, in every detail, a perfect success. For a long time a Clarksville audience has had nothing more truly enjoyable than the entertainment of the people of Miss Scott (that means the whole people of Clarksville) unite in congratulations to her upon the abundant evidence exhibited in her pupils, in learning the poetry of motion, had been in thoroughly competent hands. The very large audience, together with the profound and continued attention testified unmistakably to the appreciation in which the worthy lady is held by our people in her laudable undertaking to teach the little buds of humanity the art of gracefulness.

At an early hour, and notwithstanding the lowering weather, the hall was filled with an intelligent audience of nearly a hundred people, and at the end of the programme many were the expressions of satisfaction. The programme was a most successful one, and several amateurs volunteered their musical assistance to amuse the audience during the intervals between the different parts of the programme, and to them, and to each and everyone present, Miss Scott returned her sincere and warmest thanks, through Mr. Rufus B. Rhodes, her very efficient and happy manager for the occasion.

The opening chorus was by Messrs. Carter, Mansford, Bryan and Jackson, and was rendered in their usual grand style.

Then came the Fairy Bells, a troupe of fifteen little girls and boys from four to nine years of age, splendidly led by the little fairy belle, Miss Doris Johnson, one of the daintiest little flowers in the moving bouquet of beauty. The Fairy Bells kept perfect time throughout, and were heartily applauded.

We watched the radiant countenances of various happy "papas" in the audience, and sighed, "It must be nice to be a father."

Miss Fisher Merritt, a radiant little girl, came next with the solo, "That Young Man Across the Way," which she sang very correctly and sweetly indeed. She was greeted with a shower of beautiful bouquets, none of which were half so beautiful as she.

Miss Berta McComb then came forward with a recitation, "Baby's Letter," a touching little poem, full of sympathy and pathos. The correctness of interpretation was astonishing in one so young, and to them, and to each and everyone present, Miss Scott returned her sincere and warmest thanks, through Mr. Rufus B. Rhodes, her very efficient and happy manager for the occasion.

John H. Merkel, the Accused Murderer.

The preliminary trial of John H. Merkel, charged with the killing of Emma Drandt, the Southern Hotel, in this city, an account of which was given in our last issue, was begun on last Monday before Esq. R. D. Read, but owing to the absence of material witnesses for the State, whose presence could not then be obtained, the case was continued to await the action of the grand jury, which meets on Monday next, the 19th inst. There were no new developments, as far as the case proceeded, brought out by the testimony introduced by the State. The witnesses who were sworn testified to about the same facts that are already familiar to our readers, but the State claims that it has other and more convincing proof to establish the guilt of the defendant. There seems to be but little doubt that the grand jury will hold the prisoner for trial at the Criminal court. But as no testimony has yet been introduced by the defense, and as it is always fair to hear both sides, we would suggest that the State should be ordered to present fully investigated. It has been said that public sentiment here is strong against the accused. We do not believe that is so, but one thing is certain, that Merkel need have no fear but that he will get a fair and impartial trial at the hands of the citizens of our country.

Messrs. Quarles, Daniel & Goodpasture and Mr. R. N. Rhodes, of this city, and Mr. Sam Bernard, a prominent attorney of Louisville, Ky., have been employed by Merkel in his defense. Mr. Attorney-General Burney appears for the State.

Related, but No Kin!

A noble son of Ham presented himself at the desk of the deputy clerk of the Circuit Court the other day, and asked for a license to marry his dusky daughter. Among other problems propounded him, was "Are you and the lady related?" "Yes, sir," was the quick reply. "What relation are you to each other?" "The next relation," "Said" declared the candidate for matrimonial honors. "I mean what kin are you to each other?" explained the patient and handsome clerk. "We are kin to each other, no kin at all, said," responded the African citizen of Ethiopian descent. "But you said you were related," answered Bailey. "I thought you related to the center relationship of tab, what prevails between us at the present moment," said Scipio. He got his license.

Future Ages.

Messrs. V. M. Metcalfe & Sons had prepared the following paper to be presented in the corner-stone of the new Court House, but arrived on the grounds a few minutes too late to get it in the box. The march of progress in the manufacturing line could not be better contrasted than by this paper and the illustrated circular intended to accompany it, compared with machinery in use when our Court House shall give place to other structures:

Compliments of V. M. Metcalfe & Sons, Agents for C. H. & L. J. McCormick, Manufacturers of Harvesting Machinery, Chicago, Ill. To the future generations, Great-grandchildren:

When the magnificent structure, for which the corner-stone was laid this day to witness the ceremonies of laying the corner-stone, shall have crumbled by the hand of old Time, and it becomes necessary to erect another one, we stand, we the descendants of our day, to contribute our share of the machinery to be used in the construction of your house. Therefore we commend to your hands, and to the hands of your future generations, the most perfect and useful of all the great inventions of our time, the reaper and mowder, the most perfect and useful of all the great inventions of our time, the reaper and mowder.
